INDEX TO VOLUME 54

TITLE INDEX

Beyond Foundations: Signs of a New Normativity in Philosophy of Education – Roel van Goor, Frieda Heyting, and Gert-Jan Vreeke (54, no. 2): 173–192.

Bringing Religious Traditions into Educational Theory: Making an Example of Joseph Smith, Jr. – Bryan R. Warnick (54, no. 4): 345–364.

Challenging the Gaze: The Subject of Attention and a 1915 Montessori Demonstration Classroom – Noah W. Sobe (54, no. 3): 281–297.

Conceptualizing Teaching as Science: John Dewey in Dialogue with the National Research Council – Greg Seals (54, no. 1): 1–26.

The Corporatizing and Privatizing of Schooling: A Call for Grounded Critical Praxis – Kathryn Bell McKenzie and James Joseph Scheurich (54, no. 4): 431–443.

Critical Thinking, Epistemic Virtue, and the Significance of Inclusion: Reflections on Harvey Siegel's Theory of Rationality – R. Jay Kilby (54, no. 3): 299–313.

Education, Accountability, and the Ethical Demand: Can the Democratic Potential of Accountability Be Regained? – Gert J.J. Biesta (54, no. 3): 233–250.

Gentlemanly Orthodoxy: Critical Race Feminism, Whiteness Theory, and the APA Manual – Audrey Thompson (54, no. 1): 27–57.

Giving Artifacts a Voice? Bringing into Account Technology in Educational Analysis – Scott B. Waltz (54, no. 2): 157–172.

Globalization and Education – Parlo Singh (54, no. 1): 103–115.

History, Myth, and the Politics of Educational Reform – Robert Nelson Reddick (54, no. 1): 73–87.

The Hope of a Critical Ethics: Teachers and Learners – Donald Blumenfeld-Jones (54, no. 3): 263–279.

In the Event of Learning: Alienation and Participative Thinking in Education – Alexander M. Sidorkin (54, no. 3): 251–262.

Paying Attention to Attention: New Economies for Learning – Suzanne de Castell and Jennifer Jenson (54, no. 4): 381–397.

Plurealism and Education: Israel Scheffler's Synthesis and Its Presumable Educational Implications – Katariina Holma (54, no. 4): 419–430.

A Poetics of Teaching – David T. Hansen (54, no. 2): 119–142.

Problematizing Religious Truth: Implications for Public Education – Suzanne Rosenblith and Scott Priestman (54, no. 4): 365–380.

Running in Circles: Chasing Dewey – Michael Glassman (54, no. 3): 315–341.

Silence as the Foundation of Learning – Angelo Caranfa (54, no. 2): 211–230.

Social Justice Education, Moral Agency, and the Subject of Resistance – Barbara Applebaum (54, no. 1): 59–72.

The Sound of Silence in Pedagogy – Michalinos Zembylas and Pavlos Michaelides (54, no. 2): 193–210.

Training Aesthetic Perception: John Dewey on the Educational Role of Art Museums – Tracie E. Costantino (54, no. 4): 399–417.

What Future for Social Science? – Francis Schrag (54, no. 1): 89–101.

What's the Use of Philosophy? Democratic Citizenship and the Direction of Higher Education – Matthew C. Altman (54, no. 2): 143–155.

AUTHOR INDEX

Altman, Matthew C. – What's the Use of Philosophy? Democratic Citizenship and the Direction of Higher Education (54, no. 2): 143–155.

Applebaum, Barbara – Social Justice Education, Moral Agency, and the Subject of Resistance (54, no. 1): 59–72.

Biesta, Gert J.J. – Education, Accountability, and the Ethical Demand: Can the Democratic Potential of Accountability Be Regained? (54, no. 3): 233–250.

Blumenfeld-Jones, Donald – The Hope of a Critical Ethics: Teachers and Learners (54, no. 3): 263–279.

Caranfa, Angelo – Silence as the Foundation of Learning (54, no. 2): 211–230.

Costantino, Tracie E. – Training Aesthetic Perception: John Dewey on the Educational Role of Art Museums (54, no. 4): 399–417.

de Castell, Suzanne, and Jennifer Jenson – Paying Attention to Attention: New Economies for Learning (54, no. 4): 381–397.

Glassman, Michael – Running in Circles: Chasing Dewey (54, no. 3): 315–341.

Hansen, David T. – A Poetics of Teaching (54, no. 2): 119–142.

Holma, Katariina – Plurealism and Education: Israel Scheffler's Synthesis and Its Presumable Educational Implications (54, no. 4): 419–430.

Kilby, R. Jay – Critical Thinking, Epistemic Virtue, and the Significance of Inclusion: Reflections on Harvey Siegel's Theory of Rationality (54, no. 3): 299–313.

McKenzie, Kathryn Bell, and James Joseph Scheurich – The Corporatizing and Privatizing of Schooling: A Call for Grounded Critical Praxis (54, no. 4): 431–443.

Reddick, Robert Nelson – History, Myth, and the Politics of Educational Reform (54, no. 1): 73–87.

Rosenblith, Suzanne, and Scott Priestman – Problematizing Religious Truth: Implications for Public Education (54, no. 4): 365–380.

Schrag, Francis – What Future for Social Science? (54, no. 1): 89–101.

Seals, Greg – Conceptualizing Teaching as Science: John Dewey in Dialogue with the National Research Council (54, no. 1): 1–26.

Sidorkin, Alexander M. – In the Event of Learning: Alienation and Participative Thinking in Education (54, no. 3): 251–262.

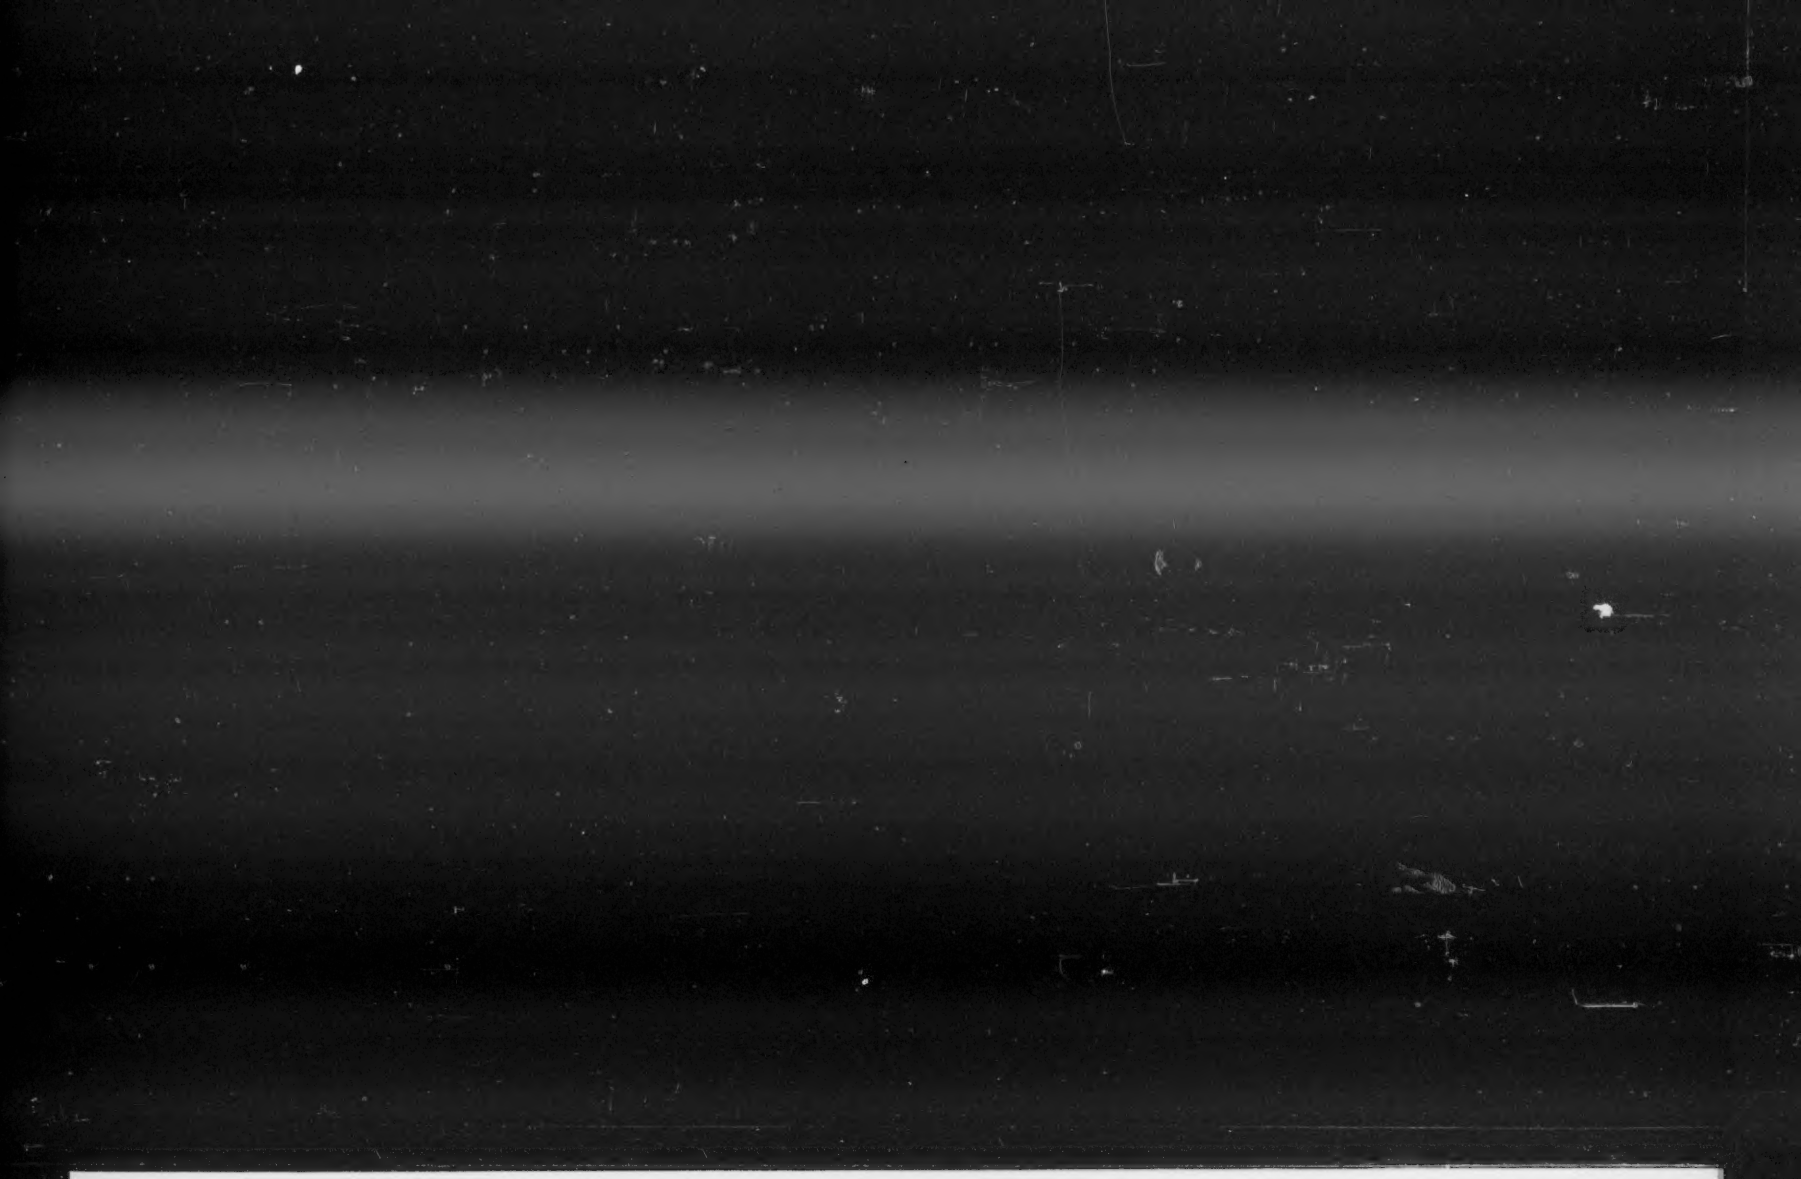
Singh, Parlo – Globalization and Education (54, no. 1): 103–115.

Sobe, Noah W. – Challenging the Gaze: The Subject of Attention and a 1915 Montessori Demonstration Classroom (54, no. 3): 281–297.

Thompson, Audrey – Gentlemanly Orthodoxy: Critical Race Feminism, Whiteness Theory, and the APA Manual (54, no. 1): 27–57.

Van Goor, Roel, Frieda Heyting, and Gert-Jan Vreeke – Beyond Foundations: Signs of a New Normativity in Philosophy of Education (54, no. 2): 173–192.

Waltz, Scott B. – Giving Artifacts a Voice? Bringing into Account Technology in Educational Analysis (54, no. 2): 157–172.

Warnick, Bryan R. – Bringing Religious Traditions into Educational Theory: Making an Example of Joseph Smith, Jr. (54, no. 4): 345–364.


Zembylas, Michalinos, and Pavlos Michaelides – The Sound of Silence in Pedagogy (54, no. 2): 193–210.